INSTALLATION NOTES

As there are many possible equipment and installaiton configurations which will affect the installation procedure, we are not providing a detailed step-by-step installation procedure for this product. Even without detailed instructions, an acceptable installation may be performed by a competent mechanic, by putting some care and time into studying the product, the vehicle, and taking a thoughtful approach to installation. While installing these items is considered a "DIY" project, here are some helpful hints to consider:

- If installing the Bolt-On DeFender™ Flares on to a Jeep already fitted with Poison Spyder Crusher Flares™ with the "Stock" feature set, the appropriate bolt holes will already exist in the Crusher Corners™, which will not need to be drilled. The threaded inserts for the stock flares, however, will need to be removed from the Jeep's body tub.
- If installing the Bolt-On DeFender™ Flares on to a Jeep already fitted with Poison Spyder Crusher Flares™ that do not already have the flare bolt holes ("Standard" or most "Modified" configurations), or other manufacturers' full corner protectors, you will need to drill 3/8" bolt holes into the corners in order to bolt the Flares on. Clamp the DeFender™ Flare in place and use it as a drill guide. Drill all the way through both the Crusher Corner™/Corner Guard, and the Jeep's outer tub.
- If installing the Bolt-On DeFender™ Flares on to a Jeep already feitted with Poison Spyder Crusher Corners™ for TJ, or for YJ/CJ with the TJ Wheel Opening, the wheel opening on the Bolt-On DeFender™ Flare will match the wheel opening on the Crusher Corners™, making it simple to properly align the Flare before drilling the mounting holes.
- If installing the Bolt-On DeFender™ Flares on to a Jeep with un-matching wheel opening (i.e. competitors' corner guards), carefully measure and position the DeFender™ Flare so that the wheel opening is centered over the center of the wheel at full up-travel of the Jeep's suspension.

- In most configurations there will be easy access to the back side (inside of the Jeep's body tub) to install the flat washer and lock nut. On some installations, where the flare is placed in a non-stock location, such as with stretched wheelbases or in a "highline" configuration, the back-side of the mounting hole might not be easily accessible, as it may be inside a cavity between inner and outer sheet metal layers of the Jeep's tub. In these cases you may consider using a hole saw to drill an access hole through the inner layer of sheet metal, to install the washer and nut. Alternatively you may consider installing a 3/8-16 "nut-sert" at these hole locations. These nut-serts may be purchased from Poison Spyder or through your local Fastenal or other industrial hardware dealer.
- De-burr and paint any bare metal that has been exposed during the installation process, prior to final installation of the DeFender™ Flare. This includes all of the bolt holes and any inner sheetmetal access holes that were drilled. This will help deter rust.
- Poison Spyder does not recommend installing the Bolt-On DeFender™ Flares directly to the Jeep's tub without full corner protectors. that are at least 1/8" thick. Any hits taken on the trail by the rigid DeFender Flares will potentially damage the Jeep's body tub if the Flares are bolted directly to it rather than to a full plate steel (or aluminum) corner protector. This warning also extends to Poison Spyder and other manufacturer's similar "Trail Corners", which do not extend to the area behind the flare, and still leave the DeFender™ Flare bolted only to the Jeep's tub.
